DEMOCRATIC CO. COMMITTEE

EVERY DISTRICT REPRESENTED AT MEETING.

Enthusiastic Organization for the Triumphant Election of the Democratic Ticket.

The Democratic party never held a County Committee meeting that was more enthusiastic and with a lager representation than the one held last Saturday. Every district had one or all of its committeemen present and every one was imbued with harmony and determination to put forth a united effort for the election of the whole Democratic ticket. The large vote at the primary was the convincing proof to every one that the will of the majority was alone responsible for the results and Democrats are always enthusiastic supporters of the will of the majority.

The meeting was called to order by County Chairman S. Miley Miller and purpose being stated to be to organize for the campaign ahead and to transact such other business that may come before it. On roll call every district was represented and there were few substitutions.

County Chairman S. Miley Miller then addressed the committee, saying:

Gentlemen of the Democratic County Committee and fellow Democrats. On the 19th day of June when last we met, quite a proposition was up to the Democratic people of Adams county, the matter of the selection of a county ticket. I believe I'm safe in saying that never in the history of the county have so many good men asked for office at the primaries and never have so many good men gone down at the primaries.

I believe that you will all bear me out in the declaration I made at the last meeting, that I would take no hand in the primary, that it was up to the people to decide who the nominees should be, and that it was not right for a chairman to work for a choice of the candidates and I believe you will all bear me out that I have faithfully kept the promise I made. I also said I would take off my coat to elect the ticket the Democatic people nominated and I'm here to do that.

The ticket nominated was the result of the greatest primary ever held in the county, out of 4000 Democratic voters in the county 3200 came out and expessed their choice. Think of it three-fourths of the Democratic voters came out. I'm sorry more of you could not be nominated but the law fixed that. Six years ago when I was asked to become County Chairman, being urged to take control and work to bring about a reunited Democracy. I said I would take no hand in convention and I have strictly adhered to that course now that primaries have taken the place of conventions. Doing so I can go out and work for every man and have them feel that I am doing everything in my power for them. Now in the campaign ahead I want every one of you to be my helper. I'm only the man at the head and am largely helpless without you. You are the men behind the guns and I appeal to you to give me your enthusiastic assistance.

I believe and feel that within the last few years that there has been a revolution in the interests of the people. This has been shown by the way the grafters have been put behind the bars and corruption has been unearthed and crushed. It means that the people will rule.

The result of the primary participated in by 3200 Democratic voters demands a duty of every Democrat, this duty is to go to the polls and confirm the result of the primary, to stand up for the ticket and elect the candidates nominated.

To-day the principles of Democracy are more discussed than at any day since they were framed by Jefferson and contended for by Jackson and I believe that the Democracy of to-day stands as it ever did for the masses and not the classes and against the centralization of power. Centralization has been tried but the people want the power in their own hands. The Republican party has been tried and found wanting. The principles of Bryan have been adopted by the Republican party one by one as they are needed to help keep that party in power Not long ago there were those who thought the Democratic party had no presidential timber for the great fight of next year but the contrary has been proved. Congress has given more laws for the benefit of the people than was given by Republican Congresses in the last 15 years. I have Champ Clark's word for this. When we have such presidential timber as Judson Harmon, Champ Clark and last but not least, Woodrow Wilson. Democrats can look hopefully ahead for a government of the people, by the people and for the people.

The legislation for the people by the New Jersey Legislature under the inspiration of Wilson, presents a striking contrast to the machine legislation of this State. When at a primary Martine was the choice for U. S. Senator and the small vote at primary was critical. Wilson said the small vote was the fault of those who failed to express themselves and not of those who voted and that the Democratic principle of the will of the majority should control Wilson is one of the greatest men of the times.

The primary of Sept. 30th was an expression of the will of the people of Adams county and I ask you to give a peaceful acquiescence in the will of the majority and I predict with your help we will elect the whole ticket.

Dr. Geo. L. Rice of McSherrystown, P. A. T. Bower of Butler, Wm. P. Stover of Littlestown, Harry Whitcomb of Huntington and Horace Heltzel of Mt. Pleasant were then appointed Committee on Resolutions and retired for consideration of same.

At the June meeting amendments to rules of the party were presented which had to lay over until next meeting at least three months distant. The rules provided for an annual election of committeemen and the primary law of 1911 providing for the election of committeemen at the spring primary and there being but a spring primary every other year it was necessary to change rules so that term of committeemen be two years instead of one year. The amendment of first rule carried unanimously and now reads:

First. The management of the interests and business of the Democratic Party of Adams County shall be placed in the hands of a county committee composed of committeemen elected as follows: Two from each district and an additional committeman for every fifty voters over 100 to be determined by the number of votes cast at the last Gubernatorial election, the committeemen to be biennially elected at the Spring Primary.

The proposed amendment to Rule 5 was next considered, whether chairman and secretary should be elected biennially as the committeemen, or annually. Upon discussion there was a decided sentiment that it would be better to have officers elected annually by the biennially elected committeemen. That a chairman elected every two years would be asked to manage a county campaign 18 months off and by that time a chairman might not be in harmony with the ticket or the issues and an annual election would help to keep up an organization, to bring the committee together. When amendment was put to a vote it was unanimously defeated, leaving the rule as it is for an annual election of chairman, secretary and treasurer be for the first day of July.

A motion was then made that Rule 5 be amended so as to read.

Fifth. The Chairman, Secretary and Treasurer shall be annually elected by the County Committee elected at the spring primary at a meeting called for that purpose by the chairman before the first day of July in even numbered years and on the First Saturday, of October in odd numbered years and terms of said officers shall be until their respective successors are elected. Candidates nominated at the spring and fall primaries shall be invited to be present at the respective annual election meeting of said officers.

While Committee on Resolutions were, absent, Edw. A. Weaver, Esq., Democratic candidate for District Attorney spoke, expressing his gratitude for the nomination given him.

The Committee on Resolutions made the following report which was unanimously adopted and committee then adjourned.

The Democratic County Committee in session this 14th day of October, 1911, do hereby adopt the following resolutions:

1st. That the Democratic county ticket nominated at the primaries of Sept. 30th is the greatest expression of the will of the Democratic people of the county ever voiced at a primary in Adams county. A ticket nominated as the result of the ballots cast by 3200 Democrats commands the respect and confidence of the whole party and demands peaceful acquiescence in the will of the majority, a foundation principle upon which Democracy is built, and we urge every Democrat to give his hearty approval and support to the ticket so nominated by the Democratic people.

2nd. That the method of selection of the ticket of our opponents is in direct contrast with Democratic methods. The Republican organization named the greater part of that ticket and gave no opportunity for an expression of the will of that party at the primary and this method deserves rebuke at the hands of members of that party who do not believe in such methods.

3rd. That the great work of the Democratic majority at the recent extra session of Congress in giving the country more constructive legislation in the interests of the people than had been given by the Republican party in the last 16 years is heartily endorsed and has demonstrated that the hope of the nation for a government of the people, by the people and for the people is with the Democratic party.

4th. That the administration of the public offices of the county by Democratic officials is entitled to the unqualified endorsement of every Democrat and all citizens interested in good government. The net debt of the county when the present Democratic Board of County Commissioners took charge of the finances of county was over $70,000. Through rigid economy and the most careful business methods the debt was reduced in two years $20,000 and a sinking fund was created in which $1000 was placed toward the liquidation of the debt as it matures. This record is hereby heartily endorsed and approved and the party pledges its nominated officials to a continuance of such careful economical county housekeeping.

5th. That the administration of the present Democratic county officials is deserving of commendation. The officers were ever solicitous in giving the best public service and courteous in the discharge of their duties, conducting their public offices as public trusts and a vote for the Democratic ticket is approval of the conduct of the present officials and a pledge for the continuance of the same service.

6th. That the Democratic ticket nominated is one of which every Democrat and citizen can be proud. They are men of ability and enjoy the respect and confidence of their communities and of the people of the county and Democratic voters are urged to work for the triumphant election of the whole ticket nominated by the Democratic people.

West Pa. Synod.

The West Pennsylvania Synod began its sessions on Monday evening of last week as reported in our last issue and were in session until Wednesday evening.

Tuesday morning routine matters were taken up and representatives of the various church activities were heard.

The election of officers for the coming year resulted in the selection of Rev. G. M. Diffenderfer, of Carlisle, president; Rev. C. E. Apple, Red Lion, secretary; Rev. Albert Bell, York, treasurer.

The retiring president, Rev. J. B. Wolf, of Glen Rock, gave his report during the morning session.

The West Pennsylvania Synod consists of 96 ministers and 82 pastorates, representing 154 congregations. A large number of the ministers and lay delegates were in attendance.

Tuesday evening, Rev. A. M. Heilman, of St. Matthew's Church, Hanover, delivered an address on "The Results of Beneficiary Education." Miss Reba Miller sang a solo and the College Church choir rendered special music.

Wednesday morning an effort was made to do away with the restriction which forbids the use of tobacco by beneficiary ministerial students, but without avail, action being deferred until next year, and the restriction remains in effect.

The matter was introduced by Dr. J. A. Clutz, who favored removing the restriction, claiming that most students came to college after acquiring the habit, and that it was unfair to ask them to abstain, when at the same time many of the ministers and laymen of the synod use the weed.

The committee in charge received instructions to withdraw support from beneficiaries as soon as the use of the weed is discovered.

Rev. George M. Diffenderfer, of Carlisle, and W. L. Glatfelter, of Spring Grove, were elected members of the board of trustees of the Tressler Orphan's Home, Loysville.

Rev. A. Stewart Hartman made the report for the Home Mission Board and Rev. L. B. Wolf for the Foreign Mission Board. The report of Rev. Albert Bell showed a gain of $1,000.20 in contribution for benevolence during the past year.

President Granville made a strong address in behalf of Gettysburg College and the report from the Tressler Orphan's Home was presented by Rev. A. R. Steck, of York, a member of the committee.

Christ Lutheran Church, York, was chosen as the place for the meeting of the 1912 convention.

A matter of special local interest was the general expression of opinion that Gettysburg would be the proper place to hold the Summer Assembly next year and that Chautauqua week would be the proper time for the sessions.

Wednesday evening the ordination sermon was preached by Rev. U. E. Apple. Impressive ordination and licensure sermons followed. The young men ordained were Revs. H. T. Bowersox, I. M. Lau, of Littlestown, T. E. Shearer, Tridle Springs, H. A. Stouffer, of Chambersburg. Those who were licensed to perform ministerial functions for one year were: George B. Ely, M. E. Smith, William M. Seligman, R. E. Peterman, N. G. Phillipy George A. Rupley. The license of Edmund L. Manges was renewed.

To the Voters of Adams County.

I take this method of thanking the Republican voters for the nomination for Register and Recorder at the recent primary election. Owing to the physical disability of the Democratic nominee, I feel that the issue before the people would not be one of a political nature and injustice to Mr. Berkheimer I feel it my duty to withdraw at this time and thus save him the labor and expense of a campaign.

AS TO PICKETT'S CHARGE

AND THE PART NORTH CAROLINA'S TROOPS TOOK.

North Carolina Tells the Injustice of the Over Credit to the Virginia Troops.

The old North State has long been denied her proper place in the history of the battle of Gettysburg and we are glad to see the world is at last being made to know the truth

It is gratifying to read the remarks of Hon. Joseph M. Dixon, Senator from Montana, a native of North Carolina, in the Congressional Record of July 18 and 20. It is regretted that Senator Dixon did not have at hand a fuller record of the part taken by North Carolina troops in the battle of Gettysburg. As soon as the newspapers announced the colloquy between Senators Martin and Dixon about Gettysburg, the Hon. B. R. Lacy and Judge Walter Clark forwarded to Senator Dixon "Five Points in the Record of North Carolina in the Great War of 1861-1865," published by the North Carolina Historical Commission, and Mr. Lacy also sent him "Pickett or Pettigrew," by Capt. W. R. Bond. Senator Dixon says he received all these booklets by the same mail but too late to incorporate the information in his speech of the 20. It is to be hoped he will be able to revise his remarks in time to print them in the permanent bound record.

For nearly half a century, ever since the ill-fated invasion of Pennsylvania by General Lee, a storm of controversy has raged about the battle of Gettysburg. North Carolinians have been mostly concerned about the reflections on the troops from our State made by the Virginia papers just after the battle, and the world trumpeted false statement that Pettigrew "faltered." This State has suffered from supposed inuendoes of reflections in the report of the battle by General Pickett, which report was amended at General Lee's suggestion. General Pettigrew was killed on the retreat from Gettysburg and made no report.

The invasion of Pennsylvania was ill-starred from the beginning. General Lee's army was at the height of its efficiency, and believed itself equal to any undertaking. Stuart, instead of being between the Confederate army and the Federals, was on a useless and fatal raid. Lee being without "the eyes of his army" could not learn of the movements of Meade, who (on June 28) had superseded Hooker in command of the Union army.

It may be said that the Confederates stumbled into the battle of Gettysburg unawares. Lee's army composed of three corps, was scattered. Hill and Longstreet were in the direction of Chambersburg and Ewell in the direction of Carlisle and York, when on the 30th of June Pettigrew's brigade of Heth's division, Hill's corps, unexpectedly discovered Buford's division of cavalry at Gettysburg. Lee immediately began to concentrate his army. On July 1st, Heth engaged the Federals at Gettysburg and was soon joined by Ewell. A little after midday the Federals were beaten.

About 2 o'clock p. m., General Lee arrived on Seminary Ridge and saw the Federals defeated and retreating in confusion to Cemetery Hill. He immediately ordered General Ewell, who had stopped pursuit to press the enemy and take Cemetery Hill "if possible." (American Campaigns Steele, p. 368.) The qualifying words were fatal to the Confederacy. Ewell, who had never recovered his health and vigor after the amputation of his leg, did not think "it possible," showed no aggressiveness and decided to wait. General Ramseur's North Carolina brigade had taken more prisoners that afternoon than it numbered men, and he was sure he could take the heights, but was recalled while advancing upon them. General Lee is quoted as saying that night to Generals Longstreet and A. P. Hill that "we will attack the enemy in the morning as early as practicable," and "directed them to make the necessary preparation and be ready for prompt action." (Long.) His purpose was to attack early in the morning (second day) before the rest of the Union troops could reach the field.

It has been frequently charged that Longstreet did not give his chief the willing and ready support that he should have done. Longstreet did not approve Lee's plan of battle and neither his head nor heart was in the fight. Longstreet (especially after the second day) considered Meade's position impregnable to Lee's army. His plan was for Lee to Swing his army around Meade's left, and throw it between the Federal army and Washington and Baltimore, keeping his line of communication to the Pootmac open, and then fight a defensive battle on ground of his Lee's own choosing. On the second the fight was not commenced at daybreak. Longstreet did not strike the enemy until nearly 4 o'clock in the afternoon. (Longstreet says 3 o'clock; Ewell says 5 o'clock.) The enemy in the meantime were heavily reinforcing, concentrating and fortifying. Ewell was to attack on hearing Longstreet's guns, but did not get into action until 6 p. m.

This seems to have been a day of misadventure for the Confederates. Writing of that day one of the first American authorities on the science of war says:

"Such was the second day's battle—on the part of the Confederates a succession of tardy, isolated, unsupported attacks, in which one division, Pickett's had not reached the field, and three others, Heth's, Pender's and Rodes, and four brigades, had scarcely fired a shot: on the part of the Federals a well managed, if perfectly passive defence, in which every imperilled section of the line had been promptly reinforced, and every assault of the enemy repulsed." (American Campaigns, p. 378.)

General Lee knew there had been no concert of action between his troops on the second day, and he hoped to make the assault next day with co-operation of different parts of his line in such a manner as to support one another. Lee's Again, he expected to attack in the early morning, but the misfortune of Johnson's division changed his plans and at 11 o'clock he ordered General Longstreet to assault Cemetery Ridge. (American Campaigns, p. 379.) Longstreet thought it absolutely necessary to hold McLaw's and Hood's divisions, to protect his right flank, and had only Pickett's division for the assault To this General Lee added Heth's division and two brigades of Pender's division, also Wilcox's brigade

"As the commands reported, Pickett was assigned on the right, Kemper's and Garnett's brigade to be supported by Armistead's: Wilcox's brigade of the Third Corps (Hill's) in echelon and guarding Pickett's right: Pettigrew's division on Pickett's left, supported by the brigades of Scales and Lane under command of General Trimble. The brigades of Pettigrew's division were Archer's Pettigrew's, Brokenborogh's and Davis'." (P. 388, "Manassas to Appomattox.")

Lieutenant-General Longstreet was in command of the assaulting columns. Major-General Pickett was the ranking division commander, but commanded only his own division of three brigades of 15 Virginia regiments. These men had not been under fire on the first and second days, and were fresh—and the only fresh troops in the assault. Brigadier-General Pettigrew commanded and led Heth's division (Heth having been wounded) composed of four brigades of 17 regiments, the statality of which were as follows:

Five North Carolina Regiments.
Four from Virginia.
Two from Alabama
Three from Tennessee.
Three from Mississippi.

Pender having been wounded, Major-General Trimble commanded and led the part of Pender's Division engaged which was Scales' and Lanes' Brigade composed of ten (10) North Carolina regiments.

The order was that the right was to make the signal of battle," p. 389 Manassas to Appomattox. "General Pickett's was the division of direction, and he was ordered to have a staff-officer or courier with the artillery director to bear notice of the moment to advance."

The assault upon Cemetery Hill was a desperate undertaking, and grew more hopeless every hour of delay. At one o'clock Colonel Alexander, director of artillery, opened upon Cemetery Hill the greatest artillery duel ever known on the American continent. His fire indicated the point of intended attack, and the Union General massed troops to meet it. After nearly an hour of cannonading, Colonel Alexander, who had nearly exhausted his ammunition, sent the following note to General Pickett:

"General: If you are to advance at all you must come at once or we will not be able to support you as we ought. But the enemy's fire has not slackened materially, and there are still 18 guns firing from the Cemetery."

At 1:40 Alexander sent another note to Pickett saying: "For God's sake come quick. The eighteen guns have gone. Come quick or my ammunition will not let me support you properly."

When the assault was made, Pettigrew led Heth's Division, and was wounded near the stone wall. Trimble leading Scales and Lanes' North Carolina Brigades of Pender's Division was badly wounded near the Federal line. General Trimble wrote

"My men were the last to leave the field. This I know as I rode in the line between the Brigades from the start down to the Emmitsburg road," and adds, "this I aver positively, that my command continued the assault after Pickett's men had been repulsed and dispersed." "This is corroborated by Captain L. G. Young, of Georgia, who was then on Pettigrew's staff, who says, "When I gave General Trimble General Pettigrew's message the remnants of Pickett's and Heth's divisions had already broken." Captain Young, I think, is now living. A year or two ago he was Brigade Commander of the South Georgia Brigade Confederate Veterans. General Young writing further in a historical paper which he made an ineffecual effort to have published in Virginia, "the manuscript is now in my prossession" referring to the intimation that General Pickett's report reflected on other troops, but was suppressed by General Lee, says:

"If it did, General Lee, who cannot have known at the time that Pickett was not in the fight at all saved Pickett from being torn to pieces by his critics. General Pickett and his staff advanced only a little way with the division. General Pickett halted at a point from whence he could not 'see the whole movement with distinctness' and was therefore not a competent witness. Had he been with his command, from his position on horseback he could have seen that the two brigades on his left broke simultaneously with his command and he might perhaps have been able to prevent the pressure of his division to the left, which was not intended, and which drove the troops on his left into the fire from Cemetery Hill which was so disastrous to them. Not having been in the fight himself, it would have been disastrous to his reputation to criticise the conduct of those who were in it and so far to the front that he could not have certainly told what was going on there." General Young says Colonel Marshall of General Lee's staff and General G. Moxley Sorrel bear him out in this statement

In the light of after events it is to be regretted that General Pickett's report was not made public, as then it would have caused the truth to be brought out at the time. I have often heard that unimpeachable evidence was ready to be produced to show that General Pickett did not know except from hearsay what occurred at the wall, as he did not go farther than the Codori barn on the Emmitsburg road.

In "Gettysburg," by Beecham (a Federal officer), a book recently published, on page 243, we read: "Pettigrew and Trimble were both wounded, the latter severely. Longstreet speaks in high praise of Pettigrew and Trimble, and the officers and men of their column. Longstreet tells us that here at the Emmitsburg road, or while both columns were advancing or trying to advance under this frightful fire, 'General Pickett finding the battle broken, called the troops off.' It does not appear that Pickett had much to do with calling off the troops of either column, but it does appear that he led his column no farthtr than the Emmitsburg road, and that the great majority of soldiers of both columns, finding it impossible to stem the fierce tide of battle beyond that line, with one accord followed Pickett back to the shelter of Seminary Ridge, and were quite lively about it. Armistead of the second line pressed forward, gathering up his shattered remnants for a final effort; and herein Pickett's column carried off the palm of glory."

The above is offered with out comment.

The fact that the casualties were greater among the men commanded by Pettigrew than they were among the men commanded by Pickett should not be construed as a reflection on Pickett's Division. Pettigrew's men were exposed to a deadly fire from the beginning of the charge Colonel W. W. Wood at the time of the battle a captain in one of Armistead's Regiments in an article some years ago in the Philadelphia Times, (statement of Captain W. R. Bond) said: "From the time the charge began up to this moment not a shot had been fired at us nor had we been able to see because of the density of the smoke which hung over the battle field like a pall, that there was an enemy in front of us. The smoke now lifted from our front, and there right before us scarcely two hundred yards away, stood Cemetery Heights in awful grandeur." Being enveloped and hidden in smoke so dense that they could not see the enemy nor the enemy see them until within "rushing distance" of the ridge, may account for Pickett's loss being less than Pettigrew's.

It is not the purpose of this article to reflect on General Pickett, and so we will not review Judge Clark's remarks upon Pickett's failure at New Bern, or the statements of General Eppa Hunton and General W. H. Bayne as to Pickett's being cashiered after his failure at Five Forks. The writer has heard of those charges before, but had never seen reference to them in print until he read Colonel John S. Mosby's article in the April number of Munsey's Magazine.

The Records show that the North Carolina troops did their duty as fully at Gettysburg as the Virginians. The records show that Pettigrew led his division and was entitled to as much credit from the battle as Pickett received. As to what troops went farthest at Gettysburg is answered by the marker erected by the government of the United States on the spot where Captain E. Fletcher Satterfield, of Person county, North Carolina, was killed while commanding Company H. 55th N. C. Regiment. This settles for all time that much mooted question

The discussion of North Carolina's war record became acute a few years ago, and on November 12, 1909, the writer hereof submitted a resolution to the State Literary and Historical Association, which was adopted, asking that a committee composed of Col. Walter Clark, Captain S. A. Ashe, Major H. A. London, Major A. C. Avery, Hon. W. A. Montgomery, Major E. J. Hale and Captain W. R. Bond be invited to investigate and report upon the accuracy of North Carolina's claim as to the number of troops furnished by this State to the Confederacy, and upon the merit of our claim "First at Bethel, Farthest to the front at Gettysburg and Chickamauga. Last at Appomattox." Among the reasons offered for this resolution was the fact that the Grand Camp of Virginia Confederate Veterans, through its chairman, Judge George L. Christian, had surprised the country by questioning the claims by North Carolina as to her record in the War for Southern Independence. The report of the North Carolina Committee was printed by the North Carolina Historical Commission in a pamphlet entitled "Five Points in the Record of North Carolina in the Great War of 1861-'5." This is one of the most valuable and most popular documents ever published in the State The articles on Gettysburg by Captain W. R. Bond and Judge W. A. Montgomery, which are especially comprehensive, clear and convincing should be read by every patriotic North Carolinian.

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

BLACK AND BLUE.

Combination Is Extremely Popular and Is Becoming to Both Old and Young.

Black combined with royal or nattier blue is to be very popular this season. The great advantage of this mixture of colors is that it is becoming alike to fair and dark women, whether young or of advancing years, and it is always more or less in favor.

Models of the great houses are often simple in design, the reason of their artistic effect resulting from the disposition of trimming, so that a woman of moderate income, but unerring taste, can work wonders by planning out her own frocks. For afternoon wear a bit of gold in addition wonderfully enlivens a dress and is generally becoming to the complexion. Gold embroidery and lace are immensely in vogue.

If a black house dress be chosen soften it with a line of blue at top of the collar or several rows of chain stitch in gilt thread. A gold dangling collar at the base of the throat or a turquoise or aquamarine pendant makes all black less trying and removes the suggestion of mourning. Unrelieved black is not, as a rule, becoming, and least of all to the woman past her first youth. Turn, therefore, to the touch of blue.

The Umbrella.

A badly rolled up umbrella, besides looking unsightly, does not wear half so long as it ought to. The process of rolling an umbrella is very simple.

The majority hold it by the handle and keep twisting the stick with one hand, while with the other they twist and roll the silk. Instead of this they should take hold of the umbrella just above the ribs of the cover. These points naturally lie evenly with the stick. They should be kept hold of and pressed tightly against the stick, and then the cover should be rolled up. Holding the ribs thus prevents them from getting twisted out of place or bending out of shape, and the silk is bound to follow evenly and roll smooth and tight. If an umbrella is rolled in this same fashion until it is old enough to look rusty it will look as if newly bought.

A DAINTY NEGLIGEE.

Many Inexpensive Ways of Copying This Simple and Attractive Little Dressing Sack.

A charming model for a dressing sack is pictured here, and, while it is effective, the construction is so simple that even inexperienced persons need not hesitate to attempt it.

To copy it for the average woman in materials twenty-seven inches wide three and one-quarter yards will be needed.

Of goods thirty-six inches wide two and one-quarter yards will be sufficient.

Developed in this style for autumn and winter wear, cashmere, albatross, henrietta, French flannel or challis will be satisfactory. When a material less expensive is wanted flannelette, cotton crape or wool and cotton mixtures may be used.

The yoke and sleeves are cut in one, and to the lower edge of the yoke is joined the piece that completes the waist.

This is done by means of an ordinary seam that offers an outline for trimming. A broad collar and a tie at the waist finish the garment.

There are several inexpensive and easy ways that this jacket may be trimmed. For example, bias bands of material piped with a contrasting color arranged to outline the edge of the sack, collar, sleeves and yoke would be inexpensive ornamentation.

Bands of soft silk edged with feather stitching and worked with French knots would be exceedingly pretty on dainty light colored goods. On dark materials bands of Persian in rich oriental colors would be pleasing, or bands of plain material in a matching color could be elaborated with a little handwork.

A negligee of china silk or crepe de chine would be attractive if trimmed with frills of soft lace and the yoke outlined with a band of the silk

A Spider With a Lasso.

Spiders have a number of ingenious ways of capturing and catching their prey. A writer in Popular Science describes an American spider which haunts evergreen trees and snares its dinner by means of a kind of lasso. The web of the spider is triangular in form. Two corners of the triangle are attached to twigs, but the other corner, which ends in a single thread, is held by the spider, perched on a neighboring twig. When a fly strikes the web the spider loosens his hold and the elastic threads instantly entangle the victim.

The Chinchilla.

The tiny chinchilla, not more than twelve inches long, with a plump little body on short, stout legs, thrives only in the tropics. The little beasts have to be killed with the utmost precaution not to injure their fur, that grows on a skin nearly as tender and soft as a web of silk. A perfect skin not larger than a small pocket handkerchief is a revelation in fur growth. The texture of every hair is finer than floss silk, the length of it nearly an inch and the coloring about that of the soft, undyed marabou feathers.

Natural Protection.

It has been pointed out that to some ground animals nature's color scheme for concealment furnishes almost complete protection. The quail crouching on the ground looks like a bunch of dried leaves. Many snakes and fishes take the precise color of surrounding sand and water. A mackerel from above looks like a fleeting ripple, while to fish enemies beneath his white belly will not show against the higher colors of sky and water. The wonderfully beautiful changes of dolphins and chameleons were not evolved to please the eye, but to protect their lives.

A Suggestion.

Mrs. Truly — Yes, my dear Mrs. Goode, we shall be delighted to have you attend our mothers' donation sociable—er—don't go to any expense—just donate any trifle you really have no use for—just something useless about the house."

"Oh, I see," smiles Mrs. Goode knowingly. But little Ethel, who has been an attentive listener, suddenly lisps: "Why, ma, you can bring pa. I heard you tell him this morning he was perfectly useless about the house!"—Brooklyn Life.

Great Expectations.

A notoriously close fisted man was taking his golfing holiday in Scotland, where he hoped to improve his game, and by driving a hard bargain had managed to secure the exclusive services of a first class caddie, who was known to be a very good player. "Mind, now," said the ambitious Englishman, "I expect to receive some really good tips from you during my stay. You understand?"

"Aye," replied the Scotsman, hitching up the heavy bag, "an' Ah'm expectin' the like frae ye, ye ken."—Golf Illustrated.

The Game of Quintain.

The game of quintain survives only in the village of Offham Green, in Kent, England. It is so named from an instrument used in tilting on horseback with the lance. It consisted of an upright post, surmounted by a crossbar turning on a pivot, which had at one end a flat board and at the other a bag of sand. The object of the tilter was to strike the board at such a rate of speed that he would be past and out of the way before the bag of sand as it whirled round could hit him in the back.

A Wild Poet.

It is believed that the best poetry is written by the untamed child of nature—the wild poet, so to speak. In fact, an eminent critic has maintained that only barbarians can write good poetry. This may explain why an editor becomes savage when a poet enters his office. He probably wishes to meet his wild eyed visitor on his own jungle plane.

If you wish to see a really and truly wild poet, seek out the bard who has written—and finds, when printed, it reads:

A red, red nose informs the world the thing we love is beer.

—Judge's Library.

The Terrors of Ennui.

Most people think that wonderful possessions make for happiness. But no, indeed. These things never bring happiness. Never, never, never! And don't you let yourself think so for half a minute. They bring, on the contrary, sadness, weariness and ennui. Oh, is there anything on earth as awful as ennui? It bites into the very soul and saps life of all that is worth while. It is worse than sorrow, worse than sickness, worse than death. Now ennui always engenders other conditions unless you die of it. Lots of people have died of ennui, though the doctors and the coroner call it all sorts of different names. And among the conditions that develop from ennui are vice and dissipation.—Designer.

SEE LIFE IN FULL.

Farsightedness and nearsightedness are both defects in human eyesight. The same rule obtains in daily living. The man who looks forever into the far future does not see his nearest duty, and the man who sees only the daily routine close about him cannot advance toward larger things. To "see life steadily and see it whole" should be each man's endeavor.

Educationrl Meeting.

The teachers of Mt. Pleasant township held their third educational meeting at Mount Superior school house, C. E. Taney teacher, on Thursday evening, October 5, 1911. The meeting was called to order by the president C. A. Stock. The secretary, Miss Kinneman, not having arrived, Miss Sadler was appointed secretary pro tem.

"School Room Difficulties" was discussed by Messrs. Felix Sanders, C. A. Stock, J. Z. Rudisill, W. H. Sharetts, Ray Sponseller, C. E. Taney and Misses Losman and Kinneman.

The speakers mentioned numerous difficulties and a number of good suggestions were given as how to overcome them. The prevailing opinion was that united effort on the part of both teacher and parents is essential to have a successful school.

"The Value of Teaching Physiology" in the Public School" was discussed by Miss Sadler and Messrs. J. Z. Rudisill, Ray Sponseller, C. E. Taney, Wm. H. Sharetts and C. A. Stock.
A. Stock.

The following teachers were present: Misses Sadler, Losman and Kinneman, and Messrs. C. A. Stock, C. E. Taney, J. Z. Rudisill, Felix Sanders, Ray Sponseller and Wm. H. Snaretts.

The next meeting will be held at Swift Run school house, October 19, 1911. "Necessity of Regular Attendance and Arithmetic" will be discussed.

As to Water Pressure.

The Fire Underwriters Association of Pennsylvania made a test last week of the Hanover water supply for purpose of securing for the town a reduction in insurance rates in Hanover. The test surprised and delighted both the town and the association, a pressure of 55 pounds being maintained distributing 1694 gallons every minute. Four additional lines were operated distributing 659 gallons per minute.

Dear Mr. Underwriters don't come this way for the Gettysburg Water Company does not seem interested in giving Gettysburg a reduction of insurance rates, or a fire protection through pressure. Or when you do come, just wait until the plant is being operated so that pressure can be taken under a heavy load of steam.

Wouldn't we all like to know what the pressure is when the machinery at the plant is standing still.

GO TO THE RESCUE.

Don't Wait till it's Too Late—Follow the Example of a Gettysburg Citizen.

Rescue the aching back.
If it keeps on aching, trouble comes.
Backache is kidney ache.
If you neglect the kidneys' warning
Look out for urinary trouble—diabetes.

This Gettysburg citizen will show you how to go to the rescue.

Harry J. Tawney, 9 Steinwehr Ave., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "We publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pill two years ago and at this time willingly speak in their praise again. My back ached almost constantly and at times I could hardly get around. The kidney secretions gave me much annoyance by their irregularity in passage and I was lame and stiff. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at The Peoples Drug Store and they positively and permanently cured me. I have been in good health ever since. I know of a number of other people who have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and in each case benefit has been received."

For sale by dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Utterly Wretched

Nervous Prostration Long Endured Before Remedy was Found.

Miss Minerva Reminger, Upper Bern, Pa., writes: "For several years I had nervous prostration, and was utterly wretched. I lived on bread and beef tea because my stomach would not retain anything else. I took many remedies, but obtained no relief until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, when I began to gain at once. Am now cured."

Pure, rich blood makes good, strong nerves, and this is why Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies and enriches the blood, cures so many nervous diseases.

Get it today in usual liquid form or chocolated tablets called Sarsatabs.

Germs Spread in Skin

Eczema, Psoriasis and other skin troubles are caused by myriads of germs at work in the skin. Unless these germs are promptly destroyed they rapidly multiply, gnawing their way deep into the sensitive tissue. This is what causes that awful itch, and what seemed a mere rash may grow worse and develop into a loathsome and torturing skin disease with its years of misery.

Don't take any chances! Destroy the germs at the beginning of the trouble with that soothing and cleansing wash, the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema. A 25c bottle will prove this to you.

We have had experience with many remedies for skin trouble but have never seen such remarkable cures as those from D. D. D. Prescription. Instant relief from the very first application.

We are so confident that D. D. D. will reach your case that it will cost you nothing if the very first full size bottle fails to make good every claim.

If you have skin trouble of any kind, we certainly advise you to drop in and investigate the merits of D. D. D. anyway. We know that D. D. D. will help you.

We Recommend It

We find that somehow the Munsing Underwear pleases nearly everybody who gives it a trial. It's a common occurrence for customers to come in and give the exact style and size worn previously, and make some remark about how splendidly the garments fit, or how long they wear, or how much they give in the way of real service and satisfaction. Because of its unusual durability and washability, we believe it's the most economical underwear you can buy. We recommend Munsing Union Suits unreservedly. They come in every required style and size, and cost no more than suits that are not so comfortable and satisfactory.

Costs no more than other kinds. Suits and single pieces for the Child, the Misses, the Adult.

Lowell and Mahaffy.

James Russell Lowell and Professor Mahaffy met for the first time at a friend's house in Birmingham, England, and talked together for four hours. When Lowell drove away in the carriage he exclaimed to his host, "Well, that's one of the most delightful fellows I ever met, and I don't mind if you tell him so." The friend did so, and Mahaffy received the compliment with equal grace and modesty. "Poor Lowell," he exclaimed. "To think that he can never have met an Irishman before!"

Minute Animal Life.

"The microscope teaches us," says a scientist, "that there are animals so wonderfully minute that if a thousand of them were ranked abreast they could easily swim, without being thrown out of order, through the eye of the finest cambric needle ever made. Yet each of the minute creatures is a highly organized number of particles, capable of moving about, of finding and devouring food and of behaving in all respects as becomes an animal as distinguished from a fragment of unorganized matter." The human mind is utterly incapable of realizing the structure of these little creatures and of fully appreciating their marvelous adaptation to the life they are destined to lead.

Ralph Waldo Emerson's Stove.

Ralph Waldo Emerson was a man of rare integrity and very particular about small things. One day a new cooking stove had been provided for his house, and, although the stove came very highly recommended, it proved thoroughly unsatisfactory and most provoking, as it did everything but what it was expected to do. After awhile the family was in despair, and some one suggested sending it to auction.

"What!" exclaimed Emerson. "Transfer our own perplexity to another pair of shoulders? No, never, unless the stove is labeled 'Imperfect.'"

And so "Imperfect" it was labeled and sold at a great discount.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Why not Cook with Gas

Don't you know your house would be many degrees cooler if you used a gas stove, and all the home people that much more comfortable.

Gas cooks faster than other fuel, hence less length of heat. A match gives the gas in full force, and cooking done, a turn of the knob removes the heat.

An economical use of gas will result in lower bills than paid for any other fuel and that means the saving of money, heat, fuel carrying and removal of ashes.

Number One.

A JOINT RESOLUTION.

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to consolidate the courts of common pleas of Allegheny County.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met. That the following amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section six of article five be amended, by striking out the said section, and inserting in place thereof the following:

Section 6. In the county of Philadelphia all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the district courts and courts of common pleas, subject to such changes as may be made by this Constitution or by law, shall be in Philadelphia vested in five distinct and separate courts of equal and coordinate jurisdiction, composed of three judges each. The said courts in Philadelphia shall be designated respectively as the court of common pleas number one, number two, number three, number four, and number five, but the number of said courts may be by law increased, from time to time, and shall be in like manner designated by successive numbers. The number of judges in any of said courts, or in any county where the establishment of an additional court may be authorized by law, may be increased, from time to time, and whenever such increase shall amount in the whole to three, such three judges shall compose a distinct and separate court as aforesaid, which shall be numbered as aforesaid. In Philadelphia all suits shall be instituted in the said courts of common pleas without designating the number of the said court, and the several courts shall distribute and apportion the business among them in such manner as shall be provided by rules of court, and each court, to which any suit shall be thus assigned, shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof, subject to change of venue, as shall be provided by law.

In the county of Allegheny all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the several numbered courts of common pleas shall be vested in one court of common pleas, composed of all the judges in commission in said courts. Such jurisdiction and powers shall extend to all proceedings at law and in equity which shall have been instituted in the several numbered courts, and shall be subject to such changes as may be made by law, and subject to change of venue as provided by law. The president judge of said court shall be selected as provided by law. The number of judges in said court may be by law increased from time to time. Hiram's Butterfly

A Story of an Aeroplane

It was poised on the rolling green turf of the west meadow and with its outspread wings looked very much like a great white butterfly.

"I call it an 'air flier,'" explained Hiram Butler to the little crowd of men and women who had gathered about the machine. "I feel justly proud of her, too. Made every bit myself except the engine."

"Must have cost a pretty penny," drawled James Lummox enviously. "If it'd been me I'd rather have an automobile. You can take the hull family out in one of them cars."

"It do seem sort of a selfish contraption," put in Mrs. Deacon Skinner. "For instance, suppose you wanted to take Ellen out on a Sunday afternoon. Where the land would she sit?" She peered curiously at the broad leather strap that served as the single seat in the flying machine.

"I wouldn't want to go," snapped Ellen Butler, with an angry glance at her husband. "Catch me trusting myself in the air with any man!"

All the while that her husband was demonstrating the wonders of his invention and even while he made a short experimental flight above the clover tops Ellen was thinking bitterly of the money that had gone into the useless machine. The bank account, savings of years, had been drained to its last dollar, and the mortgage which Hiram had placed on the house to get more money to perfect his patents seemed to Ellen like some huge blotch that would never be eradicated.

When the onlookers had gone away Ellen still remained, silently watching Hiram's movements about the machine. Presently he looked up, and his gaze met her hostile eyes. He straightened immediately.

"I wish you didn't feel so bitter about this, Ellen," he said soberly. "You know I wouldn't have taken the money out the bank or mortgaged the place if I didn't expect to make a hundred times as much with this invention.

"If it's a failure, Ellen," he went on quietly, "I'll take a job in the pin factory to Dodgeville till I've earned enough to put the money all back. I'll do it and run the farm too. But I'm not going to fail. Do you think I'd put that money in it if I hadn't felt pretty sure of success? I'm going up tonight too. Don't you want to see me?"

"No, I don't, Hiram Butler, and I wish you wouldn't fly over the house. The pesky thing might fall on it and knock off a chimney or come through the roof. Land knows, I'd like to keep a roof over my head even if I starve to death!" Ellen turned and proceeded toward the house without one backward glance at her husband.

Hiram stood by the machine, his shoulder drooping slightly, his broad forehead knitted thoughtfully. His brown eyes seemed to peer anxiously beyond the low lying hills as if timorous of the result of this evening's experiment. Budauet, the aviator, had an estate there, and he had promised Hiram he would buy the patent outright if the "air flier" would make a successful flight across the twenty miles of country that separated their respective homes.

Now, as he stood there in the pasture, his invention the public topic of the community, Hiram spoke as if in self defense against his neighbors' disapproval and his wife's bitter resignation.

"I may be a farmer born and bred," he said slowly, still with that farseeing glance across the hills, "and maybe that's the very reason I've invented a flying machine when I couldn't contrive a corn sheller or a mowing machine to save my life. It's the birds have done it. I've studied 'em till I believe I could almost fly myself."

The supper bell jangled noisily from the front porch, where Ellen awaited his coming. He was quick to catch the note of impatience in its brazen tongue and hastened toward the house. As he entered the kitchen his wife passed into the dining room and sat down at the table.

It was a silent meal, as had been all the meals in that house since the mortgage had rested thereon. At last Hiram pushed his plate aside and arose.

"I'm going down to the postoffice, Ellen. When I come back I'm going to make the longest flight I've ever attempted. If I succeed in getting over to Budauet's place he's promised to buy me out. You wouldn't want to come out and see me off?" He spoke a little wistfully.

Ellen's face turned obstinately away, as she poured herself another cup of tea.

"Excuse me!" she said emphatically. "One ninny in the family is enough! If you get as far as the chicken house I hope you'll look up the chickens. You forgot 'em last night."

When she had cleared the table and washed the supper dishes Ellen stood in the doorway looking out into the moonlighted yard. Hiram had not yet returned from the village or else he was about to start on his strange aerial journey without coming to the house again.

Half curiously and with much uneasiness of mind, Ellen stole softly through the garden into the great pasture, which was flooded with pale moonshine. Tall, black shadowy cedars were grouped about the southern boundary, and now they were dew wet and smelled faintly aromatic.

Ellen approached the machine, which lay shrouded in its canvas blanket, and its very bigness suddenly attacked her with terror of the prospective journey and the danger that menaced her husband. She wrung her hands nervously, striving to think of some method that would deter Hiram from flying that night. Under the blue sky and sunshine it would not seem so dreadful—so dangerous.

Fifteen minutes later she was returning from the barn tugging at a long rope at the end of which a small anchor bumped over or stuck into the ground with annoying frequency. In the shadow of what she knew to be the rear of the machine Ellen paused and lifted the canvas. She surveyed the intricate machinery with a growing conviction that her husband must be deterred from making an ascension above the ground. Suppose some part should give way?

She had determined upon what especial rod she would tie the rope and thus anchor Hiram to the ground until she could by wit or wile prevail upon him to give up the risky adventure, when she heard his approaching steps.

She whisked away in the shadow of the machine just in time to receive the muffling folds of canvas in a cloud upon her form. She freed her head and shoulders and crouched unseen by her husband. Carefully he examined the air flier, trying each bolt and nut, fingering a delicate adjustment here and there, his face stern and close lipped in the light of a small brass lantern held in one hand.

Then he moved forward; there was the heavy chugging of the engine, and Ellen's heart almost stopped still. In another instant it would be too late to detain him—he would be out of her reach, beyond her touch, and he could not hear her plea for pardon.

It had flown above the house. Ellen darted desperately forward, groped for and found the anchor, tied the rope hastily and clumsily to the nearest projecting rod, paused to tie another hard, square knot before jamming the flukes on the anchor into the soft turf.

With a whirring rush the machine started down the slope, the wheels revolving dizzily. The anchor whipped after, and somehow Ellen's hands closed desperately about the flukes, and then she felt herself rising upward with terrifying velocity.

Clutching the anchor, Ellen swept up with the machine very much like the tail to a gigantic kite. She heard Hiram's voice swearing vigorously, and she felt no horror. She closed her eyes tightly and held on. Her feet brushed treetops once or twice, and she knew she was above the cedar grove. Then one foot tangled in some crooked branch, and she lost her hold on the anchor. With a frightened cry she fell into the embracing arms of the close limbed cedars. Through an aperture in the branches she saw the air flier dart upward and away through the moonlight, the anchor dangling like a twisted thread, until the noise of the engine died away and all was still.

Cradled in the treetops, Ellen dared not stir for fear of falling. She was a slight woman, and she had fallen snugly into strong branches that curved upward like the ribs of a ship. Her hands were torn and bleeding, her face was scratched, and her twisted ankle pained horribly. But above all was the agony of belief that her husband had gone forth into space and would never return.

Too wretched to cry aloud more than once, she huddled, cold and stiff, through the long hours of the night. owls hooted unpleasantly near, whippoorwills throbbed in the thickets, and all around were the sleepy twitter of birds and the soft brush of wind in the trees.

She must have fallen asleep, for the sound of her name called in Hiram's stentorian tones awakened her to pale daylight. There was anxious terror in his voice.

"Here I am," she called feebly, and then louder, until at last he came wonderingly to her rescue. It was not until they were within the house and she had sobbed out her wretchedness on his breast that Hiram spoke soothingly.

"Do you know what you did, Ellen Butler?" he asked. "I was in doubt about making a successful flight, but I didn't know what was the matter with the machine. That there anchor was the additional weight that balanced her perfectly. Whatever saved it from catching in the trees I don't know. It was a clear case of Providence all through, I guess, for you had a narrow escape. That there anchor sold the machine, Ellen, for without it I couldn't have got to Budauet's. As it is, it's sold for enough to raise the mortgage and make us pretty independent besides." He yawned sleepily and stretched himself.

"It's done more than that, Hiram," said Ellen gently, the tears shining in her penitent eyes.

"What's that?" he asked. And then, looking down into her upturned face, he kissed her and smiling whimsically, answered his own query. "Settled the first and last quarrel we ever had, eh?"

Ellen nodded assent. "And shows that even the tail of a kite may be useful." She shuddered a little at the recollection of her perilous flight, and Hiram paled suddenly as he stooped toward her. And then in the moment of reconciliation they forgot the white butterfly and the fortune it had made for them.

On last Thursday at a meeting at the Union League in Philadelphia the 50th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg Commission, decided to meet in Washington after Congress convenes for the purpose of conferring with the Congressional Committee of which Senator George T. This meeting is designed to further the proposition to secure congressional aid not only for the celebration in 1913, on the fiftieth anniversary of the great Battle, but also for the proposed national memorial to be erected on the battlefield.

LIBERTY-BRUSH IS HERE

A Motor Car In ..... Reach of Every Man $350

MOTORISTS everywhere have been talking about the remarkable Liberty-Brush automobile for $350. They have been wondering how it is possible to build a motor car for such a price. You have heard it discussed.

The Liberty-Brush is here in our show-room for your inspection—on on the street for your trial. When you see it and ride in it you will wonder still more and your enthusiasm will be as great as ours. We want you to investigate the Liberty-Brush carefully, for it has established history in motordom since it was announced. Its appearance and performance are as wonderful as its price.

It will be worth your while to investigate this Liberty-Brush now There are scores of ways in which it is invaluable to you—regardless of your occupation.

The family can run to the station or the store or take afternoon drives. Salesmen can cover more territory in in shorter time—saving expense of livery bills and increasing revenue. Architects, Builders, Bakers, Commercial Travelers, Farmers, Grocers, Insurence Men, Sewing Machine Salesmen, Physicians, Storekeepers are using Liberty-Brush cars.

It is easy to examine the Liberty-Brush and we are glad to answer your questions. Ask us to tell about the Abernathy kids, ages 9 and 6, who drove a Brush from New York to Oklaboma City; or of R. F. D. Carrier Ingersoll, who drove 25,000 miles at an average cost of 1 1-5 cents a mile. Or ask about the Brush economy contest in which the winner ran 100 miles for 39 cents and 98 of 109 cars ran for less than a dollar.

Let us explain how the United States Motor Company "cares for your car wherever you are." We represent the Liberty-Brush here and we want you to know it. We will call for you if you let us know your address and we can take you any place in our Liberty-Brush that any automobile can go.
